This seminar will provide a broad introduction into citizenship studies. The first section of the seminar examines the intellectual history of the concept in ancient Athens and Rome and traces its changing meanings in early modernity through the lens of contemporary republican and liberal theories of citizenship. The next three classes look at the late 20th century revival of citizenship theory. We discuss three influential strands: T.H. Marshall's historical account of the emergence of social citizenship, Michael Walzer's communitarian conception of citizenship as membership, and Will Kymlicka's liberal theory of multicultural citizenship. The final section of the seminar engages with comparative analyses and discusses trends that undermine the close association between citizenship and nation-states.

The seminar will make extensive use of chapters of the forthcoming Oxford Handbook of Citizenship co-edited by Ayelet Shachar, Rainer Bauböck, Irene Bloemraad and Maarten Vink.

Participants who want to take the seminar for credit are expected:

- to read all the texts marked as required reading
- to prepare a reaction paragraph on the readings for each week and upload it on the seminar platform by Monday 12 am
- to read all reaction paragraphs and engage actively in discussions in class
- to introduce one seminar topic to the class on the basis of additional readings

If you want to audit the seminar without full participation, you need to register and do the reading for the units that you want to attend.
